keen interest in its adoption by Congress.

The Townsend bill provides that the national government shall construct and maintain practically four continental improved roadways, two leading north and south and two leading east and west. Also it provides that these systems shall join with those in the several States, thus making it a duty of the State Legislatures to provide funds for the construction of what will be termed laterals.

In this manner, the preamble of the bill sets forth, the various States can be afforded Federal aid on highways, which later, should the occasion demand, could be taken over for military purposes or such other use and regulation as the government may find expedient. Also, through this system, it would make available to the several States a larger sum derived from State taxation for the improving of the lateral lines or State highways.

Ing and Several Other Violations of Law.

J. L. Wright, 713 West Grace Street, and H. D. Canody, 1203 Dance Street, will appear in Police Court this morning on a series of charges resulting from an overdose of int ricants, according to the police, which include the theft of an automobile, which, police allege, was found in their possession, speeding driving in a careless and reckless manner while under the influence of intoxicants.

Wright and Canody claim, the police say, that they were loaned the car, which belongs to the Realty and Flance Corporation of Virginia. It was their misfortune, however, that the car was not properly primed for procedure in 1920, state the police, in that an additional charge was lodged against Canody for not having the proper license tag attached to the automobile. Four other persons were arrested yesterday for traffic violations and will appear in Police Court this morning. B. A. Quarles, 19, of 2012 Hanover Avenue, charged with not having the proper license tags attached to his car; J. Herbert Brittle, 18, charged with speeding; F. A. Brugh, 612 Montrose Avenue, on a speeding charge, and E. C. Anglin, 20, charged with speeding with a motorcycle, all fell into the police net.

Every man knows the fundamental doctrines of Christianity, the speaker said, and there was little chance of the present-day American citizen not knowing the principles of Christianity or of not having heard them preached time and time again. Value of Thrift

We have been taught to appreciate the value of thrift. The mere saving of food, clothing, time or energy may be economy but not necessarily thrift.

Saving of money for selfish purposes alone is the act of a miser. Going without necessary things is not thrift. It sometimes results in sickness.

Thrift is an expenditure of the income in such a way that there is an ever-increasing capital that you can call upon in an emergency. Not alone in the expenditure of your income, but in fostering good health, saving physical strength, avoiding mental fatigue and helping others that they in turn may help you also largely contribute toward thrift.

One of the greatest lessons the war has taught us is care and wisdom in the management of one's resources-thrift. The same economic laws necessary to best promote the welfare of the individual also govern the promotion and successful management of a store like this. The principles of thrift have always existed. It is only their application to modern living and modern business that has changed. Julius Caesar might have crossed the Alps in an airship. Marc Antony's orations might have been heard today on the Edison. The principles from which the airship and phonograph have been evolved have always existed. It is the application of the principles that had to

So it is with the principles of modern store-keeping. They have always existed. Their application to the principles of thrift in modern merchandising is daily evidenced in the dealings of this store.

Here VISION-the ability to foresee and think in large terms-becomes SERVICE. POWER-the command of the markets of the world -translates itself into VALUE-GIVING. Not how much profit will an article stand, but how good an article can be gotten to sell at a given price. Inherent HONESTY is concretely present in QUALITY.

SERVICE, QUALITY, VALUE-these abstract ideals have become concrete principles of thrift in the policy of this store. By its service, in its quality, and through its value-giving, we ask you to participate with us in MUTUAL THRIFT.
